POWER IMMORTALIZES LAURIER'S LIFE WORK

Mumbling Mick

My only claim to originality
(which you'll believe)
Is quite beyond my own control,
(i.e., Adam and Eve).

PROFESSOR (to class in Criminal Law): "I've just received an invitation from the warden of Bordeaux Jail. How many of you would like to go out there?"

CHORUS: "For how long?"

HE: "Is it true they make you take a bath every week at R.V.C.?"

SHE: "Certainly!"

HE: "Well . . . I come from Missouri. . . ."

SHE: "Hmmm . . . well, you just have to take my word for it! !"

Information, please.

. . . Haven't found out yet, but I'm still wondering where that chappie who was auctioning off green tie and ribbons at the dinnerless dance got hold of the unmentionable article of ladies' apparel.

He said he just didn't dare use the slogan he'd cooked up: "I'll sell you a ribbon or bust!"

"Didn't I hear the clock strike three when you got home last night, Doris?"

"Yes dad; it was going to strike eleven and I thought you were asleep, so I stopped it."

How It's Done.

I take a piece of paper
White as snow,
And place it in thetypewriter,
Just so.
I then proceedto spoil
It's innocence
With rank abuse and stuff
And insolence;
While Beauty sleeps I roam the
Shady haunts,
And peep through keyholes at
Pink paunts;
I listen to the jokes
At R.V.C.
I snoop around the Hall or
At the Pit,
Where co-eds sometimes eat,
But mostly knit.
My undercover men report
On women,
Who in revenge report
On men;
I snoop and peep and listen
All the time,
And suddenly I perpetrate
A rhyme.
And so look out; I have a nose
(For news)
And when I haven't, I rely—
On youse.

Personal, to Everyone.

This is your column, so if you have an item, send it along. Somebody might laugh at it. Just leave it at the Daily or with Bill Gentle-addressed to Mumbling Mick.

And speaking of Contributions . . .

Made me sin;
Mumbling Mick
Makes me sick!"

"NO! I DIDN'T write Mumbling Minnie!"

Salvage Drive Goes Through Rain or Shine

Last-minute Arrangements Are Complete

No matter what the weather tonight, no matter how wet, or how cold, the Salvage drive will be held, beginning at 6.00 and ending at about 10.00. If the work is carried out under adverse conditions it will be the more to the credit of those canvassing. Such is the last-minute comment of the organizers.

From R.V.C. comes the news that, because of a special dispensation, freshettes will be granted an extra leave to work in the campaign.

There will be three men and three girls on each team, and they are asked to canvass in pairs, the ladies asking, and the gentlemen carrying.

Blood Donors Exceed 600

Film Shown On Donations Of Blood

As yesterday's results in the blood donors' campaign were counted, it was found that the grand total so far has exceeded the 600 mark. This figure was submitted to the Inner War Council at yesterday's meeting, and it was decided, announced a member of the council, that an attempt will be made to reach the desired total of 2,000 donors by soliciting registration from members of the M.R.T.B. It is hoped that 1,500 donors will be registered from the Battalion.

A film was shown yesterday morning in Moyse Hall on the subject of the process of blood donation, through the courtesy of the Red Cross. This film showed not only the process used to extract the blood but also the methods used to preserve and store the blood until the time of use. Mrs. R. P. Howard, of the Montreal Blood Donors' Clinic, gave a short talk before the showing of the film on the need for increased registration of blood donors. Opportunity for registration will be open on Friday and Saturday to those students who have not yet given their names.

M.R.T. Director Speaks About Modern Drama

The Literary Society of McGill University got under way last night in the Grill Room of the Union, a large group attending despite the fact that other campus activities and poor weather detained a great many. Mr. John Hoare spoke briefly on the functions of psychology in the modern drama, concerning both the capacities of the play and the audience themselves.

Mr. Hoare pointed out that the ordinary drama is never a natural creation, but only the result of hours of patient trial and tribulation. He also discussed the foreshortening and balance of theatre perspective, the truth remaining that in the theatre, the themes produce an illusion in a group of per-

Air Squadrons Are Inspected

C. G. Power Pays Visit To Campus

The Honourable C. G. Power, Minister of National Defence for Air, arrived at the University yesterday afternoon where he inspected and addressed the newly formed Air Force Wing of the C.O.T.C. Previous to this the Air Minister made a survey of the Physics Building where a Radio Mechanics Squad of the R.C.A.F. is receiving its initial training; and then he proceeded to inspect the squad, which was lined up in the main corridor of the Arts Building.

Accompanying the Air Minister in his visit to the Physics Building were Principal James, General H. F. Macdonald, C.M.G., D.S.O., Chief Executive Assistant to the Air Minister, Wing Commander Stuart, from R.C.A.F. Headquarters, Group Captain Hume-Wright, from the No. 3 Training Command, and Mr. Sharp, the Air Minister's Secretary. Prof. D. A. Keys, who met the Air Minister at the Physics Building and who is also in charge of instruction of the Radio Mechanics Squad, guided the tour around the building. The Air Minister visited the various laboratories and conference rooms and he also examined the complex apparatus used by the unit. He saw some of the 5-tube radio sets made by the Air Force men, and visited the old attic of the building which is at present

Poor Returns Force War Council To Extend Volunteer Registration

The Volunteer Reserve Registration which the War Council recently inaugurated is falling short of expectations, according to the latest reports. To date the student registration has not reached the hundred mark, which is less than ten per cent. of the objective set.

The War Council has decided that in view of the lack of response so far manifested, the campaign will be extended until the objective of 1,000 volunteers is reached. According to an executive of the Volunteer Reserve Registration Committee, the objective will be readily reached when and if the students clearly appreciate the various programs concomitant with the Registration and the differences between them. There has been a good deal of confusion in the mind of the student body about registration for the Blood Donor Service, the Volunteer Reserve, and the Research Work.

Further, the subscription of one of the forms does not in any way obligate the student. The forms merely provide the War Council with an index of students who might serve in some capacity which they themselves indicate on the registration.

New Spirit of Nationalism Stressed by Both Speakers; Premier King Sends Message

Air Minister Extols Laurier

Need for Racial Unity Stressed By C. G. Power

"Laurier reflected in himself the best features of two great streams of culture," said the Premier, Mr. Mackenzie King, in a message read by the Hon. Raoul Dandurand at the Centenary Celebration in honour of Sir Wilfred Laurier, held last night, in the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium. The guest speakers were Senator Dandurand, government leader in the Senate, and the Hon. C. G. Power, Minister of National Defence for Air.

After reading the Prime Minister's message, Sen. Dandurand went on to eulogise Laurier. "Though of middle class origin, he was a true descendant of the great English Parliamentarians." The speaker then praised the great natural talent of Laurier as a statesman and orator. In closing, the ex-president of the Council of the League of Nations said, "We salute him as the leader of his generation."

Plaque Presented

Senator Dandurand then presented the principal of the university, Dr. James with a plaque which is to hang in the hall of the Law Faculty where Laurier was a student.

The next speaker was Air Minister Power who praised the great tolerance of the late Liberal leader. Laurier, he said, though at first distrustful of Confederation "came to see the possibility it involved in solving the racial problem by developing a common, unhyphenated Canadian nationality, in which the older loyalties would be fused and blended, not compelling any man to forget the land of his fathers, but bringing all to put first, the land of their sons. "It lay with Laurier," said Mr. Power, "the task of breathing into the nation's body the breath of life."

The present crisis said the Air Minister must be met with the weapon handed down to us by Sir Wilfrid. "The spirit of Canada," he said, "could not survive in a world dominated by racial tyranny and given over to racial slavery. That is why every young Canadian, whether he watches the shores of Labrador, patrols the waters of the Pacific, guards the cliffs of Dover or the fortress of Hong Kong, or

War Council Studies Drive

Fifty Percent Of Volunteer Drive Reached

At the meeting of the Inner War Council last night, the various drives now being conducted around the Campus were discussed. Three matters were chiefly dealt with—the McGill Blood Donors Registration Centre, the Research Volunteer Drive, and War Services Volunteer Registration.

The Blood Donors Drive has received the appreciation of the Red Cross for the number of donors secured, but it was mentioned that McGill's total of six hundred compares rather unfavourably with the thousand volunteers at the University of British Columbia. There has been such a slowdown in registration that the tables in Strathcona Hall and the Biology Building have been removed; the drive will be continued till Friday.

The Research Volunteer Drive which set up its tables in the Arts Building today, and which should not be confused with the Blood Drive, has reached fifty-five per cent. of its objective of one hundred. Thirty-two of these are women, twenty-three men.

Sen. Dandurand Presents Plaque

Character and Achievements of Laurier Praised

The service held last night in the Gymnasium-Armoury commemorating the birth of the great Canadian statesman, Sir Wilfrid Laurier was symbolic of the union of the French and English speaking peoples for which Laurier stood. With the exception of the Honourable C. J. Power who gave the commemoration address, each of the speakers spoke in both French and English, and the two languages could be heard everywhere among the crowd which attended the ceremony.

Following the playing of the National Anthem by the R.C.A.F. band, the service was opened by F. C. James, Principal of McGill, who introduced the the Rt. Hon. Raoul Dandurand. Senator Dandurand read a message from the Prime Minister concerning the work Laurier did towards the blending of the two cultures of the Canadian peoples. A plaque commemorating the life and work of Laurier was then presented by Senator Dandurand to Principal James to be hung in the Law Faculty of McGill where Laurier was a student. This plaque is to be replaced after the war by a metal one which will be a monument" for all time."

Maurault Introduces Power

The Honourable C. G. Power, Minister of National Defence for Air, was introduced by Mgr. Olivier Maurault, rector of the University of Montreal. Mr. Power opened his address by telling of the first time he met Laurier. It was in September, 1911. Laurier was then an old man of seventy, newly defeated at the polls; Power was a college student. But to Mr. Power and his contemporaries, Laurier's speech marked the opening of a new tradition, a "tradition of toleration and moderation," which came to be connected with everything for which Laurier ever stood. Mr. Power reviewed the early life of the great statesman and spoke of the spirit of unity for which Laurier stood.

Among the service units present were several R.C.A.F. units and the Air Force Wing of the C.O.T.C. The band of the Fusiliers de Mont Royal joined with a band of the R.C.A.F. to provide the music for the service. The R.C.A.F. band, led by Sergeant Thomas J. Burry, played "James McGill," "Put On Your Red and White Sweater" and the R.A.F. March Past, while the platform party were entering. The Fusiliers played the "King," the "Reve Passe," "Colonel Bogey" and the "March Past of the Fusiliers, composed by their commander and band leader, Captain J. J. Goult.

The platform party consisted of members of the faculty, representatives of the armed forces, and the

Theme for McGill

The Honourable C. G. Power, in speaking last night on Sir Wilfrid Laurier's conception of the destiny of Canada, dealt with a theme at once topical and eminently representative of the larger field of Laurier's service.

As Mr. Power put it, we are faced with much the same task that faced Sir Wilfrid in the dark days after Confederation. "Nationality should be our great object—the nationality which inflames and purifies our people with the lofty and heroic love of country—the nationality of the spirit as well as of the letter—a nationality which may come to be stamped upon our manners, our character and our deeds."

But Mr. Power did not imply in his speech that, since we are faced with these same tasks, Laurier failed. Rather did he stress the fact that Sir Wilfrid's work is in danger of being brought to naught by the same forces that are striving to destroy us by any and all means within their power. "The enemy's agents and sympathizers seek to discredit Parliamentary institutions and democratic self-government; they seek to foster religious controversy, to promote racial dissension and to set class against class."

Canada is doing her share to defeat this enemy. Further, Canada is doing it voluntarily. "We are in this war as Canadians, to preserve Canada. We did not declare war for Britain; we are not waging war for Britain, but with Britain; and the outcome matters just as much to Canada as it does to Britain."

Here is a noble theme for McGill. Let us strive, in the one great effort, to defeat the enemy and to perpetuate the tradition of Canadian unity so justly linked to the name of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Gift to Commerce

Post War planning has often been emphasized as the main job of universities in this time for crisis; it has also been pointed out that this planning, to be efficient and of any value, must begin now.

The donation of $100,000 by Mr. Samuel Bronfman to aid the reorganization plan of the school of commerce at this university should be generally recognized as a step in this direction. Dr. James, in commenting on the gift, has explained this well.

"The need for qualified men and women will be just as great after the war has been brought to a victorious conclusion, since Canada, in common with other nations, will have problems of reconstruction that will demand all out technical knowledge and administrative wisdom, if they are to be solved satisfactorily.

"To enable us to attain that goal, business leaders and labor leaders, government servants and private citizens, will need to possess a high spirit of co-operation and a deep technical knowledge of the economic obstacles to be overcome.

The importance of these ideas is nowhere more well realized than in the universities themselves—in the very institutions which are most capable of carrying them out successfully. The drawback has always been that the public—from whom the universities draw their support—have very often failed in this realization.

Mr. Bronfman's gift, we hope, is one indication of the growth of a new understanding among the public towards the broader issues involved in the basis of permanent reconstruction. In this the universities have an important part to play; Mr. Bronfman's gift will aid McGill immeasurably in playing its part.

Bryn Mawr Vignettes

Living in a girls' dorm, attending a girls' school (and strictly girls at that), and doing graduate work has proved a somewhat unusual and novel experience for one H.B., late of McGill. After being here over a month, we feel much more qualified to write that column, "Not About Men" that was turned off the press weekly last year. For this Bryn Mawr College is certainly not about and not for men. It is a staunch feminine stronghold, and the 650 girls attending College represent all aspects of femininity. We found it somewhat difficult at first getting used to the idea of seeing nothing but girls on the Campus. For days we walked around, wondering where the engineers were, or the med students or even the artsmen. Finally, we began to realize that these just did not exist at Bryn Mawr. And before long, we ourselves were looking quite amazed when a man crossed the Campus. Such is the rapidity in which an atmosphere is imbibed. . . .

Co-education's the Thing.

Still we're all for co-education. At the Graduate Hall where we're living are gathered together girls from all parts of the world—not only the most distant states in this country are represented, but also France, Germany, Italy and South America have all students here. Besides interesting social, political, and economic discussions, the topic of co-education is often touched upon. Those who have known a co-ed college in their undergraduate years are all one hundred per cent. for them. The others favour girls' schools. We tell them that is only because they don't know better. . . .

Life, however, is proving very stimulating here. Bryn Mawr is situated in one of the wealthiest sections of the country, right near Philadelphia. We manage to go into that old historical city quite often, and each time find something new of interest either to see or do. Philadelphians are well aware of their city's history, and will gladly talk about their heritage. Our first day in a Family Society in a suburb of Philadelphia (where we do our social case work) provided us with some unforgettable memories of Philadelphia. . . .

The First Day.

We have often read about what went on in the city streets of a big American city, and especially in those areas where a good deal of social work is done. We had not been in the agency long, before we started out on our first case, in a particularly "shady" part of the town. As we walked along the streets, we thought about the latest murders we had read, and other such things. Just on turning a corner, we went smack bang into a young chap with an innocent-enough face, but who was sharpening an axe, and eyeing it in a lusty way. He looked at us and grinned, but needless to say we were already far down the street ringing our client's doorbell. All the way there we had been practising "the woman's name is Mrs. U. and she lives on D. street." When the door opens, don't we say, "How do you do, Mrs. D.?" Yes, indeed that was our introduction to social case work. We won't forget it. . . .

A Bonnet and Cape.

One of the things that has interested most of the girls living at the Graduate dorm here has been the terribly small cupboard space in the bedrooms. After all, girls with wardrobes that most certainly "Mademoiselle" would approve of attend this College, and yet we wonder where they put their clothes. On investigating, we found out an interesting little fact about Bryn Mawr. It seems when it began (some 60-70 years ago), it was strictly a Quakers' School, and the girls who attended and lived in the dorms had only their little bonnets, and the traditional Quaker dress, and therefore did not need large cupboard space to accommodate all their clothing. This might only be a legend, but it sounds plausible. With the size of the wardrobe the average girl has at Bryn Mawr today, some enlargement of space has sure been necessary. . . .

She's a Bryn Mawr Girl!

We were interested in looking into the stereotype notion and finding out just what the "typical Bryn Mawr girl" implied. The only characteristic we have seen that might be applicable is an abundance of sloppy sweaters, and hair falling over one's eyes. This we saw at McGill and others have claimed to have seen it on other campuses, and so we can make no contribution to "what does the Bryn Mawr girl look like?" When we were at Princeton on our way here, we found that the typical Princeton man could be spotted more easily. As for extra-curricular activities, they seem to resemble McGill's to a great extent. The newspaper is only a weekly one, however; but other activities remind us of our alma mater, except for the West Point men seen frequently on the campus here, This, I admit, is new. . . .

A Part of a Whole.

Although the college itself is situated in a very peaceful country-like district, yet we are near enough to a large city and have sufficient enough communication to be aware of the vital, active role United States is playing today in the world conflict. "Defence" is on the lips of everyone, and cries of "complete participation in the war" are heard. Labour's right to strike in defence industries, and Roosevelt's policy are ready topics of discussions. To all outward appearance, in this quiet almost secluded place, a scholar seems to be quite removed from life, and there are those who wish to live so; but, on the whole, the student feels that the academic side of her education is but one part only today, and does not exclude her from the larger scene. . . .

Here and There.

Yes, life in the U.S.A. has proven a stimulating adventure to date. Yet many a time we think, with much sentimental reflection, of McGill, of our old friends, and particularly of the "Daily," which always represented to us one of the greatest enjoyments of our undergraduate years. We wonder if all is well with them. News of McGill filters in very sparsingly here. Maybe some day soon, though, an old friend will send us a "Daily," and then we'll read for ourselves. . . . —H.B.

CAMPUS SOCIETIES

1. THE S.C.M.

If you had enrolled in McGill University for the session 1893-94, you would have received a forty-page booklet, with a cover as artistic as the most up-to-date "signs of our times," printed in crimson and white, with the upper right-hand corner displaying the fimiliar three martlets rampant on a field of. . . . You guessed right! The "Bible!" Only, it was published and issued by the Y.M.C.A. of McGill University, and your 1893-4 copy was issue No. 4.

What happened to the Y.M.C.A. on the campus? Patience, for that very question will be satisfactorily answered after you have read the rest of the story. But first, would you not like to take a little peep into your 1893 "Bible?"

On page 7, you will find some "Useful Hints," under which you will learn that the College Yell is "M. C. G. I. L. L, What's the matter with old McGill, she's all right, oh yes, you bet!!!" Familiar is it not? Next you are admonished to subscribe for the "Fortnightly." What's that? "Oh, that was the name of my grandfather" cries the Daily you are now reading. The "Fortnightly" became the "McGill Outlook," a weekly, by 1900.

The rest of the booklet tells you about University Societies, the Athletic Clubs (Cricket, Football, Hockey, and two Lawn Tennis Clubs and a Cricket Club). There is also a guide to places of interest in the city, a section giving postal rate, and advertisements of all the fashionable business places of yester-year.

What the Students' Society is today, the Y.M.C.A. was in those days. It sponsored the useful activities of orienting freshmen, of running a student employment bureau, of assisting students from out of town to find rooms and helping them make friends. It provided these services with the Handbook, as useful then as it is today.

Just as the Daily is the direct lineal descendant of the old "Fortnightly," and the 1942 "Bible" of the 1893 Handbook, so the "S.C.M." (Student Christian Movement) is the heir of the old Y.M.C.A. From a room graciously donated by the Faculty of Arts and Science in their building, to the Y.M.C.A. building at the corner of McGill College and Sherbrooke, acquired during the 1896-7 session, to the present Strathcona Hall, remodelled from the old building, the Movement has had a steady growth, but has always been run by students, for the maximum good of students.

From 1920, when the financial support of the metropolitan Y.M.C.A. was withdrawn, and when the college association decided to become a local unit of the newly formed national Student Christian Movement of Canada, it has had to depend on the students themselves to provide the funds with which to continue its useful functions and activities, and to help solicit members of the faculty and friends in the city for their financial help.

In addition to maintaining Strathcona Hall, a residence for over sixty men from various parts of Canada and the world, it provides facilities for the general student body; meeting rooms; the Pit; it takes a major part in the freshman programme; and the Conversat has long been famous to generations of freshmen and freshettes. It sponsors study groups, conferences, and fireside chats, where the student has an opportunity to discover for himself, but with the help of, and in company with, others who, like him, are interested in finding them, the true and lasting values in life.

As for the women in the S.C.M.: Well, first of all, there was a Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y, back in the Nineties; then the Y.W.C.A. of Royal Victoria College, dating back to the early years of this century. By the beginning of World War I, there was no Y.W., but only a Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.M. again. By 1923, we find a separate S.C.A. at R.V.C. doing much the same work as the newly formed S.C.A. was doing for the men at Strathcona Hall. But the girls often came to meetings in the Hall. There was, however, continued the old Ladies' Auxiliary which helped the men to take care of the rooms in the Hall.

I don't know when the final amalgamation came about—they were still separate came obtu—they were still separate in 1930, but today, as you and I know, there is only one S.C.M. in the University, and the president is now one of the girls!

Shall we go back to the 1893 "Bible" for a last word? Page 8, paragraph 5 reads, "Do not treat the men collecting subscriptions for College societies or other objects as public enemies, but rather lighten their work by subscribing as often and as promptly as you possibly can." —J.K.-S.

Donating Blood

The Process of Blood Donation

Those who saw the second showing of the movie on blood donation in Moyse Hall yesterday may have had difficulty in understanding the film after the sound track gave out. This article will try to make up for the running comment which unfortunately didn't run.

After the blood donor is medically examined and his temperature, blood pressure and other things have been found to be normal, he lies flat on a specially constructed table. A rubber band is placed around his arm above the elbow and made just tight enough to allow the veins to stand out. A prominent vein is chosen, and the skin over it is cleansed with alcohol. Then a few drops of a local anesthetic are injected into the skin over the vein. This forms a small bleb which quickly becomes quite insensitive to pain. Through this painless bump in the skin a hollow needle is passed right into the vein beneath. If the blood donor isn't looking, the needle will be in and the blood flowing without him realizing that the worst is over. If he does look, he'll be surprised to watch his skin be punctured as painlessly as if it were someone else's arm.

The blood is collected in a small bottle. The donor slowly clenches and unclenches his fist to assist the flow of blood. When about 400 ccs. have been taken, the needle is painlessly removed, and a small bandage applied. The donor is given a cup of tea or coffee and relaxes for a few minutes. He then leaves the clinic and returns to his daily work.

The blood that has been collected is taken to the clinic's laboratory. Here a sample is tested for the presence of germs of various kinds. The blood is also "typed" according to one of four groups—O, A, B or AB—and is then shipped to Toronto to be processed.

In the meantime the blood has clotted. (Yesterday's article erroneously stated that sodium citrate is added to prevent clotting.) The fluid part left is called "serum", and this is taken out. The serum is centrifuged to make sure all the blood corpuscles and particles of clot are removed. Then the serum from about ten donors is mixed, or "pooled," and placed in bottles. After again testing for freedom from germs, the pooled serum is immersed into a bath of alcohol kept at a temperature of 94 degrees below zero. The bottles are turned slowly while the serum freezes in a few minutes. Then they are placed in a vacuum cabinet for three days and all the air and the frozen water in the serum is drawn off. This leaves a fine white powder.

The powdered serum is the finished product. It is kept in sealed bottles which are held in metal containers, and these are shipped by the Canadian Government to England and thence to places where blood is needed for war casualties.

The advantages of dried serum is that it is very stable, very light for transportation, and conveniently administered. It lasts indefinitely, and it is much lighter than the serum which is its equivalent. And it does not need to be kept at low temperatures in an ice-box as do other blood preparations. All in all, the blood we're donating is receiving the newest and best kind of preparation for the important work it is to do.

Editor, McGill Daily.

Dear Sir,—On the evening of Nov. 20th., we attended the Commemoration Ceremonies of the centenary of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's birth at the Armoury.

Much to our surprise, we observed that there were in attendance not more than half a dozen McGill students. Despite the fact that invitations were offered through the media of the Daily, and twice during the English 2 lectures, as well as at many other lectures, the students failed to show.

This ceremony was extremely impressive and educational, and in our opinion this shows very poor initiative and spirit on the part of McGill students.

McGill will miss its column this year on the N.H.L. Canadiens' home games, but from time to time this column will deal with the way play is going in the senior circuit, in order to give a little info to those who might otherwise miss that most absorbing column of last year.

To date the Canucks have not figured in the win column much to everyone's chagrin, but the season is still in its cradle, and by the time Christmas rolls around they should have found themselves, and be bowling over the opposition in no uncertain manner. The additional players that will be added to the roster to replace injured players look good on paper and may come through in the clutch.

However the tempo of sport this Saturday will be switched to Ottawa where the Eastern Canada Football championship is being played between the Hamilton Wildcats and the Ottawa Rough Riders. The latter while heavily favoured to take the verdict, will have all they can handle, and the speedy Alerts can not be counted out by any means.

Hamilton packs the leading scorer in the East this year in the personage of Al Leonard, and then the same player did not partake in the last scheduled game which adds more impetus to the occasion. We call the Rough Riders to win because their wingline is much stronger then the opposition, and in a game like this, that fact will bear a great deal on the result.

Meanwhile in the Quebec Senior Hockey League, the champion Royals have struck a snag, and are next to the bottom of the pack, which must seem very unusual for a team slated by many observers as this year's Allan Cup winners. They have been hit with their perennial injuries, with McGill's own Bud Farmer being the most serious casualty. The latter suffered a broken leg at the start of the campaign, and will be lost to the club for two months.

The class of the "best amateur circuit in the world" seems to be Don Penniston's Quebec Aces thus far, and they seem headed for a great season. Both Cornwall and Ottawa are overladen with power, and can match anything Montreal has to offer in the way of Pats and Canadiens. However, it appears

Swimming Classes Open Monday For Beginners

Announcement has been made of a "learn to swim" campaign to be organized on the campus for the purpose of giving students who may not know how to swim a chance of learning. The first of these classes will be held Monday, November 24, at the K. of C. pool at 5.30 p.m.

Free instruction will be provided for all students who turn out on Mondays to learn to swim. A list has been posted in the gymnasium locker room for students proposing to take advantage of this course to sign.

The K. of C. pool is open to all McGill students every Monday and Thursday from 5.30 to 6.45 p.m. Besides the classes to be held for beginners this year's swimming plans also call for a life saving class, which opened yesterday and also an Intercompany water polo league to get under way shortly.

Badminton Players to Dance Saturday Night

Something new in the way of entertainment will get under way this Saturday evening, Nov. 22. This will take the form of a mixed round-robin in badminton to be followed by dancing and refreshments at the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium.

When the players are tired of batting the birdie around, the dance will begin. It will be held in the B.W. and F., which is to be specially fixed up for the purpose. That is, the floor will be treated, and a Nickelodeon will provide music. Some Redwings will be on hand to act as hostesses.

Aggies Play Hosts To Independents In Exhibition Tilt

Tomorrow afternoon will mark the opening of the basketball season at McGill when the Independant I team meets the Aggies in the Macdonald Gym. The Redmen are boing by bus, and the match is expected to start around 3.00.

DEEP SECRET

The strength of the Aggies is still a deep secret, and tomorrow's game will let the cat out of the bag. The team is composed mainly of Seniors and Grads who have shown splendid form in the past years, and they should furnish the Intercompany league with plenty of competition. With Ross Chapman as playing coach the team includes Sevigny, Jenkins, Archibald, Moster, Kachanoff and Cameron.

The Independent 1 team has held only one practice to date; most teams rely more on the strength of their attacks than on practice. It is a case of going out on the floor and play, which might prove a winning combination with the team spirit and the fast type of play featured by the Ind. 1 in this first practice. This team is made up entirely of Chemistry Grads who played last year under the banner of F Company. They proved their ability at that time by being runners up in the Intercompany league and this year they intend doing even better. The captain is Ken West and the rest of the players are Jack Davis, Art Neish, Don Robinson, Abe Luckerman and Al Stuart.

With these two teams meeting tomorrow, we will have an idea of the kind of play we may expect in the league this winter. Competition will be strong judging from the number of the teams. 37 are already lined up, and amongst them there will surely be a few very strong combinations of players.

There are for instance the two teams which the R.C.A.F. Radio Locator School stationed at McGill will enter. Members of these two teams have started practising in the United College, and with talents drawn from all parts of Canada, they might form all star aggregations which will have to be reckoned with by the other contestants.

Even with the large number of teams in the league there is still room for another Independent. All those interested should hand their names immediately to Coach Van Wagner. Anyone not taking Military Training is eligible for this team.

Rugby Banquet At Union Thurs.

Footballers To Be Tendered Annual Dinner

The annual banquet held for all football players will take place at the Union Cafeteria Thursday next, November 27th at 6.30 p.m. This affair has been in the past years the highlight of the football season, and once again it will provide a fitting closing to an active schedule.

Coach Tom Chown wishes to stress the fact that this affair will be completely informal. There will be no speeches. It is a simple get together between coaches and players, and the mood of the evening will be come one come all and join in the fun and leave the ball room manners at home.

Four teams have been active in the Intra Mural league this season, Army, Navy, Air Force and Macdonald college. The unconquered Army team will occupy the high chair tomorrow night, but this does not mean that the other teams will not be equally honored at the proceedings.

It has also been stated by coach Chown that every player that took part in the season gridiron tustles is not only invited but expected to attend.

Coeds Play Cage Fixture at M.H.S.

Sections A-1 and R In 16-16 Deadlock

Preliminary arrangements for the Laurier Centenniel last night necessitated the R vs. A-1 section basketball game's being played in the High School gym instead of the Memorial gym, as previously scheduled.

Not to be daunted, however, yesterday afternton's downpour followed the coeds even as far as the basketball court, there to form into slippery little puddles near the hoops. Considering that the announcement of the change in gyms came but a few hours before the game, the turnout was amazingly prompt. So prompt in fact, that the janitor of Montreal High, who had not been informed of the change in plans, was a little dubious about permitting those who arrived before 5 o'clock.

The game was very fast, showing excellent teamwork on the part of both sections. Special attention must be drawn to the fact that R Section had no substitution throughout the full game.

During the first quarter Section A-1 took the lead, with some very fine passwork displayed between Marj Abbey and Sue Mackay. Sue, who played an exceptionally fine game, placed two free shots in succession during the first half. Although A-1 was not as well organized, both sections were fairly well matched. The defence section of A-1 was not very strong, as compared with the forwards, but improved somewhat during the last half. Quite to the contrary, the defence section of team R played remarkably well.

The forwards, although quite strong, slowed up for a while during the end of the first half, only to wind up with 12 points in the second half, bringing the score to a 16-16 finish.

Line-ups:

Section A-1: Forwards, S. Mackay (6), M. Abbey (2), M. Chandler (4); guards, E. Agranovitch, G. Dougherty, D. Hopton; alternates, D. Liddy (2); M. Mabon (2); R. Casgrain.

Section R: Forwards, E. Johnson (8), M. Carmichael (4), M. B. Harris (4); guards, G. Nassif, B. Weatherill, B. Kirsch.

R Section includes third and fourth year students, some from Phys. Ed. Section A-1 includes first and second year students.

This is your only chance, as a novice, to win points for your Company plus an athletic award for yourself in any of these specific sports.

Debaters Hold Meeting Today

Further business of the meeting today will be a discussion of certain matters regarding a proposed debate with New York University. It is hoped that final arrangements for this debate will be completed at this meeting.

that the Royals' most dangerous rival is Quebec, and the former will have to battle right down the stretch with this year's edition of Aces.

Flash: Yehudy just informed us that McGill's Dunlop Cup winner will be an entrant in the Canadian 5 mile marathon in Toronto tomorrow, and it appears that this is very reliable information. If this is so, some more prestige should be added to McGill by Saturday night.

The Intercompany basketball league will start next Tuesday, although the season opens tomorrow at MacDonald when the Independents invaded Ste. Anne's. Much speculation is prevailing on how the new setup is going to work, but from all accounts it seems a better arrangement than last year when there was much controversy over the use of players. The new system is really quite simple in the way the teams are arranged, and there should be no difficulties arise if each company follows the instructions laid out.

Be back with you next week. Adios.

The district is entirely English-speaking, so no difficulty is anticipated in the matter of language.

When work is done, the teams will return to the Union, where there will be dancing to the tunes of a nickleodeon and where refreshments may be obtained from the Cafeteria.

Everyone is asked by the executive to remember that he is likely to be a criterion of McGill in the eyes of others, and to act accordingly.

sons so that consciously and subconsciously they experience the author's original mood and purpose.

The theatre itself creates a certain atmosphere. In a good audience, under the anaesthetic of the speakers' voices, people begin to mingle with the characters—psychological identification.

Two other very important factors in the writing of plays are the playwright's gauging of his audience's "common denominator" and their "saturation point." The common denominator is, in brief, the variability of different audiences in different cities of different countries.

Saturation point is when an audience has reached a point of saturation emotionally. Plays are a vision of life rather than a reproduction of life.

The actors must have the power to project any imagination into their words. This, he reiterated, is the most essential part of acting; and is the main difference why the theatre and Hollywood will never become reconciled.

There is no such thing as naturalness in the theater, Mr. Hoare concluded. Everything is grimly planned and calculated, according to conventions of time, place and action. After the meeting, a period of discussion took place, after which refreshments were served.

Air Squadrons Are Inspected

being reconstructed into laboratories, conference rooms, and a library for the R.C.A.F. boys.

Mechanics Squad Inspected

Following this visit, the Air Minister proceeded to the Arts Building where he inspected the Radio Mechanics Squad lined up in the main corridor of the building. After this inspection he gave a short address to the men of the unit. He stated that the men of this unit should be proud for two reasons: firstly, because they are associated with the R.C.A.F.; secondly, because they are getting their instruction at McGill. He admitted that the work that they were doing is difficult and monotonous, but remarked that with patience and courage all members of the unit would succeed and that they would be a credit to the R.C.A.F., McGill, and the Empire itself.

The Air Minister then went to the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium. Here he was met by Major Hope and was introduced by Dr. James to the senior officers of the C.O.T.C.

As he entered to inspect the Air Force unit of the C.O.T.C., which was to act as his Guard of Honour, the Air Force Band from the No. 3 Training Command played a march. In charge of the Guard was Flight-Lieutenant L. Savard. While making the inspection, Minister Power found it fit to stop on several occasions and talk to some of the boys of the unit.

Power Addresses Guard

After the inspection the Air Minister addressed the Guard. He said that the members of this unit were "pioneers in the inauguration of actual air-crew training among the undergraduates of the Universities of Canada." In his concluding remarks he said that these airmen "are blazing a trail that many of your fellow-students both at McGill and at other Universities will follow with alacrity and enthusiasm.

Following this address Air Minister Power took the salute at the March Past which closed the ceremonies for the afternoon.

He is not merely helping to keep the invader from our shores; he is helping, too, to preserve the kind of world—a free world—which is the only kind of world in which the Canada of Laurier or, indeed, any nation worth preserving, could survive."

It was revealed that the response to the Volunteer Reserve Registration has been very slow. Accordingly it was stressed that the matter is purely voluntary and that the filling out of the form constitutes absolutely no commitment of any sort.

Culliton to Speak Tuesday At Commerce Luncheon

Commerce will hold their first luncheon next Tuesday at 1.00 p.m. in the Union Grill Room. The guest speaker will be Professor Culliton of the Department of Economics. The subject of his address is, however, unannounced.

The nominees for the Scarlet Key Society and for the Students' Executive Council will be introduced to the gathering, so that they may get a better idea of whom to support in the forthcoming elections.

After Professor Culliton's address, Commerce Students will be given the opportunity of taking a 50-minute tour of inspection at the William Thomas Co., a well-known Montreal advertising firm.

Tickets are obtainable from the class presidents.
